this is a voice that must be heard patti smith a poetic rush to madness a stunning original voice as lyrical as it is unnerving alan weisman author of the world without us and countdown in the shadow of catastrophe markiyan kamysh writes with all of youth s wayward lyricism like a nuclear kerouac rob doyle author of threshold a rare portrait of the dystopian reality of chornobyl ukraine as it was before the russian occupation of 2022 since the nuclear disaster in april 1986 chornobyl remains a toxic forbidden wasteland as with all dangerous places it attracts a wild assortment of adventurers who feel called to climb over the barbed wire illegally and witness the aftermath for themselves breaking the law here is a pilgrimage a defiant sacred experience in stalking the atomic city kamysh tells us about thieves who hide in the abandoned buildings the policemen who chase them and the romantic utopists who have built families here even as deadly toxic waste lingers in the buildings playgrounds and streams the book is complete with stunning photographs that may well be the last images to capture chornobyl s desolate beauty since occupying russian forces started to loot and destroy the site in march 2022 an extraordinary guide to this alien world many of us will never see kamysh s singular prose that is both brash and bold compared to kerouac and gonzo journalists captures the understated elegance and timeless significance of this dystopian reality please note this is a companion version not the original book sample book insights 1 celia was always up for a change of scenery and this trip was not her first her hair was a deep brown not quite as black as the coal ash that coated life in the pennsylvania town she had left behind shenandoah it was a town about 100 miles and roughly the equivalent in light years from philadelphia 2 celia had a secret job working for the project in new york city she was not allowed to ask questions and she was told only what she needed to know to get where she was going she was not allowed to know anything about her destination 3 the szapka family had endured their share of difficulties but they persevered complaining would not help secure the safe return of celia s brothers al and clem it wouldn t make her father s work any more steady or clear his persistent cough 4 celia s brother ed was the only one who stayed in texas he was the oldest and she loved him the most she did everything she could to help the war effort from cleaning to working in the mines the manhattan project s indispensable man general leslie r groves believed that to achieve success that he should start with superb and gifted people and that young people would normally be more energetic confident and curious and thus be more likely to work harder and longer general groves was a career military engineer during world war ii and was responsible for the construction of the pentagon and numerous installations and factories that played major roles in the manhattan project s making of the atomic bombs that were dropped on japan in 1945 fat man and littbo beneath the atomic city is a novel that describes the 1927 birth of george thomas moneypenny into a coal mining family living in hardburly kentucky it details the death of malcom moneypenny and the family s move to tennessee and the unlikely pairing of littbo moneypenny with the famous general and how everyday life twisted and turned until the entire secret mission unraveled at the seams and completely re directed the outcome of the war effort the novel traces personal life in the atomic city from illicit affairs moonshining and bootlegging secret underground bunkers the purchase of 1200 tons of uranium ore from a warehouse in new york and to the final military battles on the island of tinian and the flight of the enola gay over hiroshima japan a collection of poems that explore what it means to be from the atomic city a city built atop cleared out rural communities in east tennessee during world war ii and with the sole and secretive purpose of enriching uranium for the atomic bomb the poems look back to the more isolated appalachian culture of previous generations discovering the identity rifts caused by such massive and rushed development in trying to understand the poet s own cultural inheritance of both nuclear weaponry and an appalachian hardness the poems begin to meditate on inhabitation they ask what it means to live in a country a local community a body the poems travel far beyond the atomic city s limits incorporating characters that live in some sense at the edge of a community as he crosses the atlantic the spanish poet jiménez wonders if either sound or vision are more trustworthy tools for perception an aging grandmother in tennessee realizes that she still drives her younger body in her dreams an american woman becomes aroused after touring the killing fields in cambodia and the prophet of oak ridge who supposedly predicted the manhattan project considers how his baby daughter has become a thing after death the various voices show the poet grappling with her own guilt over hiroshima and ultimately attempt to understand the limits of both grief and love how one inherits a tragedy
